Question: Can we use the high-level information in Esterel source to generate efficient control circuits?

Approach: Manually optimize circuits generated by a syntax-directed translation and understand what insight was needed.

Answer: Effective optimization required both local and global information. Semi-global reachable state information crucial to get best results.